prepare them for adoption. During 2018, we had 35-50 animals in foster homes at any one time. While in foster care, we pay for all veterinary expenses, as well as other incidental expenses as required. We purchase food, collars, leashes, crates, and other items needed to assist the foster families to care for their foster animal. We also purchase flea and heartworm prevention for the duration of their stay in the foster home. Because the animals are living with a foster family, we know a lot more about their temperament and personality, and we can use this information to help find a perfect match with the adopter.

Adoption Program: FUR screens adopters, including a written application and home check for prospective adopters. We also start every adoption with a one week sleepover, so the potential adopter knows everything there is to know about the animal before making the decision to finalize the adoption. The adoption fees we charge include: spay/neuter, vaccinations, microchip, heartworm treatment (if applicable) and any specialty veterinary care required. We also hold regular adoption events. Adoption fees are one of our primary sources of income to help offset our veterinary and foster expenses.

Explanation

Shelter Introductions & Evaluations: Recognizing that FUR can never rescue all the urgent animals ourselves, FUR started a program in 2017 to do informal introductions and evaluations of shelter dogs to help promote dogs to other rescue groups. We organized volunteers to go to rural shelters, get the dogs out of the kennel for awhile, and then do controlled introductions with other dogs and cats. We then post a detailed description of each dog, along with photos and videos, to give resuce groups and adopters a better idea about the dog's personality. We've done introductions and evaluations for more than 90 dogs, which has lead them to be rescued.

Explanation

Save Our Strays: FUR introduced this program in 2017 as a new intake diversion program to rescue stray dogs and cats, get them vet care and move them into foster homes. We were already assisting other rescues and private individuals in trapping or recovering stray dogs. FUR has trapped many long term strays. Animal Control Officers don't have the time to dedicate to trapping difficult to locate animals. Our rescues run from a few hours to several months.
